The Wyer families of Maine originated with Robert and Agnes Wyer. They were of the 5th Wyer Generation in America. They came to Orr's Island, Harpswell, Me., with their Mother, Mrs. Lettice Wyer, who had married for her second husband, Joseph Orr, the large owner of Orr's Island.

Their line of Robert and Agnes Wyer has thus been carefully traced by James Ingersoll Wyer, Librarian of the N.Y. State Library, who has compiled a fine Genealogy of many lines of the Wyer Family in America: "Dr. Wheeler in his History of Brunswick, Topsham and Harpswell, Me., greatly erred in writing that the Wyers of Orr's Island, Me., were of Irish origin. The Wyer Family has always been one of good standing in Scotland. Another branch of this family was at St. Martin's-- in the-- Field, London, England, in the 16th century. (1st generation) Edward Wyer the ancestor of the American Wyers, was a tailor, and was born in Scotland in 1622; and came to Charlestown, Mass., as early as 1640. He died at Charlestown May 3d, 1696, leaving an estate of 150 pounds. He married Jan 5, 1659 Elizabeth Johnson. (2nd generation) William Wyer b Charlestown, (4th generation) William Wyer b Apr 21, 1728; is said to have been killed on a wharf at Boston, Mass., where he was guarding valuable property. A man of sterling qualities. He married Lettice, whose maiden name is said to have been Elliott, although no certain proof of this has as yet been found. She was born in 1720, and died at Orr's Island, Me.,

Sept 18, 1800, aged 80 years. She was a woman of noble and helpful character. She is buried in the cemetery of the Old Congregational Church, Harpswell Center, Me. She M(2nd) at Boston, Mass., Nov 5, 1760 Joseph Orr, for whom Orr's Island, Me., was named. From his Island he carried many cargoes of wood to Boston, Mass. On one of these trips he met

Mrs. Lettice Wyer, and was at once God to her devoted friend and admirer when he saw the brave way in which she bore the tragic loss of her husband, and the noble training which she was giving to her orphaned children. Mr. Orr took her to his fine old home which is still standing on Orr's Island, where he was a noble father to them, and where they in every way proved themselves worthy of his love.

When these lines you see
Remember you must follow me.
With nerves and sails unfurled
She steered her bark to yonder world.
Her nimble ~~0000~~ wit and active limbs
So humane, meek, and kind,
In the dust must be ~~0000000~~ refined.
Her spirit's soared to other worlds
And in the dust her nerves and sails are furled.
When the dust of earth I rise
To claim my mansion in the skies,
May this my glory be
That Christ is not ashamed of me.

THE RECORDS OF CAPT JOSEPH WYER OF THE 6th GENERATION.

(6th generation) Capt Joseph Wyer b Orr's Island, Me., Mch 27, 1778; d at Bangor, Me., where he had long been a very worthy citizen, Aug 23, 1872. Soon after his marriage he removed to Topsham, Me., and remained there until four of his children were born. When he went to sea as a successful Captain Mr. Isaac Thompson who married his sister Jane looked after his farm. About 1823 he built a vessel at Bowdoinham, Me., located there, and sailed from that port in the coasting trade. He was very energetic and fearless. At one time his vessel was loaded and ready for Boston, Mass., The people told him that the weather was very unfavorable for his trip. One Captain said that he must remain right where he was. Capt Joseph Wyer said that he thought that there would be no trouble, and at once pushed out into the river. He reached Boston in safety and quickly unloaded his cargo. As he was entering the Kennebec River again he met the same Captain who had told him before his trip that the owners of the vessel ought to turn him down if he started out in such a day as that. But this Captain did not have much to say at this time. Earlier in his life Capt Joseph Wyer went to a three-month school in the winter and carefully studied navigation. He went to sea and made trips to Boston when he was a mere boy. He became Captain when he was very young and kept steadily at this work until past the middle of his life. By the time that he was 21 years old he had two-hundred silver dollars in his sea chest. He had saved them out of his earnings. He had also generously helped several of his relatives. On one of his earliest trips he was wrecked in the Gulf Stream, and was on the wreck eight days and nights. Everything had been washed overboard from his vessel, and all that he and his companions had to eat was raw corn. His finger nails were nearly all soaked off from his being so long in the water. But he had good courage in the midst of all of his danger and sufferings. At last a sail hove in sight, and he and his companions were rescued. During the War of 1812 Capt. Joseph Wyer was captured by the British; his vessel was confiscated, and he and his companions made prisoners. They were put on board a 74 Man-of-War named the Screamer, and taken to Bermuda. They were there three months before they were exchanged for other prisoners, and permitted to return home. They were well treated, though they were kept on a diet of pea soup, hard bread and coffee. Capt. Wyer and Isaac Tompson were drafted, and ordered to join a Regiment to defend Fort Popham at the mouth of the Kennebec River. This was in harvest time. So many had gone to the war that only the old men and boys were left at home. The women had to harvest the crops. His wife, Marcia (Dunning) Wyer was then then only in her 19th year, but with the aid of her brother Rufus, a lad of 12 years, she harvested the crops.

In the time of Capt. Joseph Wyer it was customary for all the people to take liquor freely. But as he went from place to place he could easily see how men were injuring themselves by this habit. He at once decided to set an example of total abstinence, and held firmly to it, though sarcasm and jeers rang against him from all sides. He as firmly resisted all other temptations. When he was imprisoned on the British man-of-war the men mistrusted that he knew all the prominent men of Topsham, Me., who were carrying on the smuggling business and making lots of money. They told him that if he would tell them all that he knew they would give him a good sum of money, and give him a Lieutenant's position in the English navy; but he refused to give a single word of evidence against his fellow townsmen.

Years afterwards when Capt. Wyer was in financial difficulties he told this to one of his townsmen, who now bore the title of General, and that he had shielded him from financial ruin. But the man simply thanked him, and coolly walked away, jingling the money in his pockets. This test he also stood without a word of complaint or sarcasm. He was once detained at Liverpool, England, in his ship for three months. A very handsome English girl waited on his table at the boarding house. She became very much interested in him and finally offered herself as his wife. She told him that if he would take her to America with him that he should have the nearly three--thousand dollars that she had inherited from a relative. But he told her that he could not do this, even if she possessed the largest fortune in the world, as he would soon marry the handsome, brilliant Marcia Dunning, who was waiting for him at Harpswell, Maine.

Later on in his life Capt. Joseph Wyer met with many great financial losses. These were largely through people whom he had trusted and helped. Though he then had seven children dependent upon him he took up life's work bravely and hopefully. Soon after this he was able to purchase a farm at Medford, Maine. He went from thence to Bangor, Me., and staid awhile. He returned to Medford for five years; buying 2,500 acres of timber land, and gave much attention to lumbering. He was not long contented in this work and in 1835 he returned to Bangor, Me., where he lived continuously at the old Homestead, 109 Grove St., Bangor,

Capt. Joseph Wyer married Oct 13, 1813 Marcia Dunning, who was born at Harpswell, Neck, Me., Oct 31, 1794; and died at Bangor, Me., Apr 13, 1863. She was the daughter of William Dunning, who was a man of sturdy and trustworthy character, and was of the fourth generation from the ancestor Andrew Dunning. William Dunning married Anne Skolfield the daughter of Clement Skolfield and Alice Means. A friend has well written of Marcia (Dunning) Wyer, "wherever she went she drew to herself a large circle of friends from all classes of people. Her kind heart gave her a wonderful magnetism which enabled her to be of great help to many families. She had a wonderful skill in aiding in all kinds of sickness. She had very strong nerves, and would often stay and help in sick rooms while the doctors performed some of the most difficult surgical operations. She was always called in to help and advise in the times of critical illness among her neighbors. Later on she was sent for from long distances by those who had heard of her wonderful successes. Her presence in sick rooms was full of cheer and benediction. Few people in her day stood by so many suffering and dying people to give them hope. All the physicians who knew her gladly acknowledged her power and helpfulness. Many times such skilled men said to her, "If I had known that you were here I should not have needed to come to see this patient. You can do everything which it is possible for any one to do." Many sorrows came to the home of this brave woman and her husband. Their greatest grief was when their little daughter Hetty died from scarlet fever when she was a little past seven years of age. She was a fine singer, a favorite with all, and a very remarkable child. But they bore every trial with true Christian trust and bravery."

M Mch 19, 1776 James Barstow who was born at Hanover, Mass., Oct 8, 1774; d at Orr's Island, Me., Feb 20, 1827. The following sketch of the sad ending of the life of Mrs. Agnes (Wyer) Barstow is thus given in Dr. Wheeler's History of Brunswick, Topsham and Harpswell, Me., "On the 23d of Jan., 1822 the house of James Barstow of Orr's Island, Me., was burned to the ground. Mrs. Barstow, who was then 74 years of age, and who was very fleshy, was taken out of the house in her night clothes, and carried to the house of a friend. A portion of the way thither she had to walk. She died in three days after this in consequence of her exposure. Mr. Barstow never recovered from his exposure and the shock of grief and loss; and he died in 1826. The origin of the fire was a candle 600 which was placed under, and in too close proximity to, a shelf."

Mr. James Barstow was the owner of considerable property and stock. The ear marks of his cattle are recorded in the old Harpswell, Me., Records under the date of Nov 1, 1766.
